WARE REBALD, SUNDAY, DECRURER OF 1868.

Votes for his seat.

Mr. Aviry, (dem.) of Tennessee, (from the back-ground)—What member was that?

Mr. Farnsworth—Hon. Carl Johnson. It came with a very bad grace from the democratic party to throw up to the republican party that they were in favor of the political equality of the negro.

Mr. Logan, (dem.) of Ill.—Is there in your distinction between bimself avowed that he was indebted to that class of votes for his seat.

the republican party that they were in favor of the political equality of the negro.

Mr. Logas, (dem.) of Ill.—Is there in your district no distinction between negrees and white people? Do they all vote together?

Mr. Farshworm did not know. So far as the question of social equality was concerned, the republican party did not believe nor maintain it. But the republican party did not believe nor maintain it. But the republican party did not pelieve nor maintain it. But the republican party did not pelieve nor maintain it. But the republican party did not pelieve. If his friends were at all afraid of internarying with negroes. If his friends were at all afraid of internarying with negroes. But so far as the rights of men were concerned, the negroe was his (Farnaworth's) equal, and the copnal of his colleague.

Mr. Logas asked whether the republican party had not voted for the abrogation of all laws in reference to the distinction between whites and blacks, as regarded their testimony in the courts

Mr. Logas except all the did not, he ought to have due to.

Mr. Logas—Evacity. Hid not the republican members.

d one it.
LOGAN—Exactly. Ind not the republican members hast lilinois Legislature voic to expunge the word to "from the school law, so as to make it read os and blacks."

"white" from the school law, so as to make it read
"white and blacks."

Mr. Farsworm did not know. In his State they admitted a man who did not believe in God to testify, also a man covered with pollution, and he could not see why they should exclude the negro. But it was the true test to submit the credibility of a witness to the jury. When they said that a man assautted and wronged by a villanous democratic white man, or a democratic doughface, should not be permitted to testify, he said it was a damnable statute that prevented him. Is the gentleman satisfied?

Mr. Ioan—Certainty, if the gentleman is satisfied.

Mr. Farsaworm—How is the democracy*

Mr. Logas—Very well. (Laughter.)

Mr. Farsaworm then reviewed the course of Judge Douglas in reference to the Territorial question, contending that he (Deuglas) had placed himself on both sides of the question. The ropublican party was founded upon principle, but the democratic party of lilinois was a man worshipping party, worshipping Douglas. Whatever Douglas said was law to them and right. He would ask his colleague if he agreed?

shipping party, worshipping Douglas. Whatever Douglas said was faw to them and right. He would ask his colleague if he agreed?

Mr. Fours.—We worship Stephen A. Douglas, and you worship Fred Douglass. (Great laughter.)

Mr. Farsworen then inquired whether his colleague from the Firih district, and his party in Illinois, would support whoever was nominated at Charleston, no matter what was the platform?

Mr. Moreas, (A. L. dem.) of Ill., had no desire to be drawn nto the conversation which had been held with his colleague. He had no doubt that the Charleston Convention would adopt the Charleston Had no doubt Judge Douglas would support the nominee.

Mr. Farsworth—That's no answer.

Mr. Moreas—Then, sir, I will say they will.

Mr. Farssworth rejoined that Judge Douglas had declared in a letter that he would not accept of a nomination unless he was placed upon a platform that conceded the right of a Territorial Legislature to legislate upon the question of slavery.

Mr. Moreas—We consider all that our own business, not yours.

right of a Territorian Signature to legislate upon the question of slavery.

Mr. Moraus—We consider all that our own business, not yours.

Mr. Farshworth, in reply, held that it was also the business of the republican party, and asked with what consistency Judge Boughas could support the nominee of the Charleston Convention upon a platform upon which he would not himself be a candidate.

Mr. Sarra, of Va., then proceeded to address the House. In consequence of the course of remark indulged in by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Grow), he said he felt it his duty to take his part in the debate. When the House assembled it was upon the heels of a remarkable incident, that aroused the public mind and brought about a revelation that startled the country with amazement. It was seen that sixty-eight members of the last Congress, besides aumorous other gentlemen of the highest position, had endorsed a pamphlet known as the Helper pamphlet, inaugurating a crusade of blood, murder, treason and insurrection against one of the largest sections of the Union. What had been the first development? One of the very gentlemen who had endorsed this book had been put in nomination as presiding officer of this House. That presiding efficer must sustain the most intimate personal and social relations necessarily with the members over whose deliberations he presides, and he asked the House and country if they would rightfully and truly perform their great social and political duty by electing that man to preside over this body? He put the question here, and he desired the country to understand it. They may have the power by force of numbers to put a man who is a murderer, a robber, a man who proclaims his deadly hostifity to one half of the Union, in that chair—but I ask them if it is right?—If they will stand as the representatives of constitutional liberty on this floor?

Mr. Smrii (quickly)—I am illustrating. I did not say the gentleman is a murderer. I have no such thought, and I was about to say so, and it would have come wi ntleman.

Mr. Shirm (imperiously)—I was illustrating. Would us vote for a murderer?
Mr. Shirm and others (eagerly)—Certainly not.
Mr. Shirm If the act of a party—
Mr. Currs, (rep.) of lowa (very much excited)—I call e gentleman to order. I consider that a reflection upon embers on this floor. It impeaches the honor of every an on this side of the House, and I ask the gentleman to call it.

man on this side of the House, and I ask the gentleman to recall it.

Mr. Surru (firmly)—When I have anything to recall I will do it without being asked. (Applaase in the galleries.) If the gentleman will just keep cool he will perhaps fare all the better for it. I charged sobody with being murderers or robbers upon this floor, but I do charge that when we came here we found that sixty-eight members of the last Congress—many of them now here-did endorse a pamphiet, according to what we had a right to believe and suppose was just as bad and as dammable. (Cries of "Good," and applause in the galleries.)

The Christ said that he gave notice yesterday, that if the rules of the House were again violated by this applause in the galleries, he would call upon the officers of the House to suppress it. In accordance therewith he called upon the Sergeant-at-Arms and Doorkeeper to perform their duties. Here ensued a scene of considerable confusion, many members crying out, "Clear the galleries," whilst others hoped that such a course would not be pursued. In the galleries a commotion could be observed, and one middle aged respectable gentleman exclaimed loudly, "I will leave it!" and made his way through the dense throng, whilst the Sergeant-at-Arms passed at a rapid pace out of hoped that such a course would not be pursued. In the galleries a commotion could be observed, and one middle aged respectable gentleman exclaimed loudly. "I will leave it!" and made his way through the dense throng, whilst the Sergeant-at-Arms passed at a rapid pace out of the main door of the House to intercept him.

Finally order was restored, when the Clear stated that it was not his intention to have the galieries cleared, as many orderly persons occupied them, but simply to preserve order.

The business of the House then proceeded.

Mr. Sarms said he was proceeding to illustrate the position that had been taken by the democracy, and had used strong figures of speech for the purpose of making it in a way from which there could be no escape, and to vindicate the democratic side of the House from the aspersions cast upon them from time to time of trifling with the organization of this body. He said again that when they came here under the circumstances to which he had adverted, it was their duty to raise the question which was raised by the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Clark), and he was glad to see that the honorable gentleman from lows showed a becoming sensibility. He knew how he (Mr. Curtis) felt upon that subject, nor did he mean to intimate in any sense that that gentleman would do anything dishenomable. But he put the question, whether he would vote for a man for the presiding officer or this House who endorsed the dectrines of the Helper book?

Mr. Curtis replied that the gentleman knew that he would not, and he believed he knew that the honorable member nominated would not sanction any assault upon the rights of Virginia or any other State. He misunderstood the gentleman when he put the proposition, but still he could not suppose the gentleman seriounly believed that any republican member was so insensible to honoras to dare to bring into the House any one who would propose or alternate to endors any book like that referred to, or countenance such an outrage as that of Brown in Virginia or anywhere

Mr. Nr.sov thought it proper to say that when Mr. Sherman had disavowed any intention to interfere with slavery in the States he considered that he (Mr. Sherman) had repudiated the ultra doctrines of the book. That was the way he (Nelson) understood him.
Mr. Skrrm would not go into the subject, but contended that he (Mr. Sherman) had not disclaimed the sentiments of the book as perfectly and fully as the gentleman from lows had done.

of the book as perfectly and fully as the gentleman from lows had done.

Mr. Mouss, (rep.) of Pa., quoted from a speech made by Mr. Sherman on the President's Message, in which he distinctly stated that he was opposed to any interference by the Northern people with shavery in the slave States. He had been seen that Mr. Sherman held these sentiments now.

Mr. Shri's said that he would not allow Mr. Sherman of speak by deputy. He demanded that when he desired to be vindicated he should speak for himself. He knew gentlemen wanted to hold the democracy responsible for the fallure to organize the House. This was manifested by the extraordinary manuer of the gentleman from Pennayivania (Mr. Grow). That gentleman had told the House that the Naw York Hexarb had supplied his side of the House with brains. (Laughter.) He would like to know who supplied him (Mr. Grow) with hat essential property? (Continued laughter.) That shrase was not original with him; he got it from Iorace Greeley, or at least from the New York Tröme. By that was not the worst of it. The gentleman proclamed that by this discussion the democracy were engaged in disseminating the Helper book, and had given it a civilation that the Republican Committee had tried to effect with a year ago.

Mr. Grow wished to correct a word. If he had used a civulation that the Republican Committee had tried to effecin vain a year ago.

Mi Grow wished to correct a word. If he had used the wids "Republican Committee," instead of "Publishing Committee," it was a slip of the tongue.

Mr. Strik knew that it was reported in the New York Thatalow Republican Committee." He supposed the gentlemy had corrected it for the Globe, but the New York Hand had a reporter who except things as as they fell from the lips of gestlemen. He had put down the words as they were unkered by the gestlemen (Mr) Grow), and it was not the "Pan shing," but the Republican Committee." He would like to know what difference the gestlemen found between norm! He believed that Horace Greeley was the chief he to of the "Republican Committee."

that Horace Greeley was the chief he as of the "Republican Committee"

Mr. Grow said that if members would take the Go's they would find exactly what he did an except the change of the word "Republican." It gentlemen chase to read the telegraphic reports, and that was what he complained of.

Mr. Swirm replied that gentlemen reformed themselves very much in the Globe. When they get not the office of the Globe they put themselves in a different dress.

Mr. Grow said that was the only alteration he had made.

Mr. Grow said that was the the third made.

Mr. Sarm read the report from the Halle.

Mr. Sarm read the report from the Halle.

Mr. Sarm-Is it "Black Ropublican" there?

Mr. Sarm-Vell, the gentleman think I said so?

Mr. Sarm-Well, the gentleman has got to accustomed to it that I suppose by this time he knows it by heart.

Mr. Grow—Ido not know it.

Mr. Sarm then proceeded to charge upon Mr. Grow the responsibility of the failure of the Post Office Appropriation bill at the last session of Congress, by which the mail service of the country was brought into its present deplorable condition, reading from the record to prove his positions.

mail service of the country was brought into its present deplorable condition, reading from the record to prove his positions.

Mr. Brancia, (dem.) of N. C., said that he was one of the committee of conierence on the disagreeing votes on the Post office appropriation bill and he felt compelled to say to this House that nothing could have surprised him more than to hear the tlay before yesterday the lamentations of the gentlemen from Ponnsylvania (Mr. Grow) overthe loss of that bill and the fate of the mail contractors. His friend from Virginia (Mr. Smith) had cited a large part of the history of that bill. He proposed to state more; and he said here, in the presence of the House and the gentlemen from Pennsylvania, and where it would be known and heard by the mail contractors, that Mr. Grow alone was responsible for the defeat of that bill. Without intending to impeach his motives, he (Mr. Branch) thought he could say that the object he (Mr. Grow) had in view was to defeat the bill maxing appropriations for the Post Office Department, in order to compel the President of the United States to call back Congress in extracession, that he and his friends might obtain the control of the organization of the House at an earlier day. He (Branch) did not intend to divulge anything that occurred in that committee of conference, but he asserted that the honorable gentleman (Grow) know then and knew now that if the House had agreed to take the Senate bill and disagree to the amendment increasing the rate of postage, that the Senate would have receded, and the bill would not have been passed. He challenged a contradiction of the fact. If the object of the gentleman had been to prevent the Senate from infringing upon the prerogatives of the House, what reason could he give the mail contractors for having voted twice against the bill before the Senate bill had been put upon it?

Mr. Grow claimed the floor to reply, but a long discussion ensued as to whether Mr. Smith would be entitled to the floor if he yielded for any purpose

An account of her departure from Savannah—
How the mate han away with her from the Western Islands, etc.

Boston, Dec. 24, 1859.

Cantain Welton

The yacht Wanderer, of Savannah, Captain Welton, from Flores, has arrived here. Wellon reports that she sailed from Savannah on Oct. —, in charge of Captain Martin, for the ceast of Africa, for a cargo of slaves, and guese women. Captain Martin subsequently went ashore for provisions, taking with him the chronometer and charts. In his absence Welton, the mate, got under weigh and steered for the coast of America; made Fire Island, Dec. —, and bore up for Boston; put into Tarpaulin Cove for a pilot. Welton states that he was carried of from Savannah against his will, and that the name Martin was assumed. The Captain's real name was Lincoln P. United States Marshal.

cumstances:—On the 20th October, Lincoln Patten, under the assumed name of David Martin, put fifteen men on the assumed name of Pavid Martin, put fifteen men on board the vessel (which was then lying in the river below Savannah), to assist in taking on board provisions, water and stores. A little later he came on board himself, accompanied by Edward Taibot, pilot, and Capt J. Black, shipping agent. He called all hands to get under way, and, drawing a revolver, swore he would shoot any one who refused to work or who might interrupt his movements. He also threatened the shipping agent and pilot with death if they attempted to leave the vessel. Some of the crew who knew his plans loaded the two guns with grape, and armed themselves to enforce his orders against those who had been induced by false pretences to against their wishes.

Mississippi, after nominating their delegates to Carleston, passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the State of Mississippi will present to the National Democratic Convention Jefferson Davis as her choice for the Presidency, and her delegates to said Convention are hereby instructed to use all honorable means to procure his nomination.

Resolved, That the democracy of Mississippi, in convention assembled, re-endorse the platform of principles laid down by the democratic party in the National Convention of 1856, and hence declare that the democratic party is the party of the constitution, and recognizes the equality of the several States, and the right of the people of all the States to occupy and enjoy their common territory; that it denies the power of the federal government, or any authority derivative from it, to discriminate between property in slaves and other property existing under the constitution of the United States and the laws of the general government to provide adequate protection for slave property in the territories, and wherever it has rightful jurisdiction.

Resolved, That in the present ohiet magistrate of the United States, James Buchanan, we recognize a statement of exalted worth and tried integrity, and eminently deserving the support and confidence of the American people.
